Why should I pay for this site?

With an abundance of free material on the Internet, it's a good question: Why pay money? Well, first of all, you may not have to if you're a client of selected financial advisors or a member of an institution associated with this site. In those cases someone else has paid the registration fee for you and all you need to do is to register/login.

Registered users will have access to the entire site. This means all 173 financial commentaries and the Study Guides. In addition, you'll also have the option to contact us for extra, or specific financial counsel and advice. We may be able to help you find local financial advice/coaching to give you personal service. Financial services are more "high-touch" than "high-tech." Trust is absolutely essential. We believe that your use of Wisdom with Wealth is an investment—and as with all financial matters, no investment means no return. Nothing ventured, nothing gained. Easy come; easy go.

There is no advertising on this site, and you will have access to all updates to this site. Finally,

I've already paid for registration, but still can't access the site.

In order for us to determine the problem please check the status of your account under Account Details from the Account menu. Your account may be expired, or there may be another issue. If you are sure you have paid, but your account status is not properly updated and you still cannot access the site, please send us an email. We will look at our records and confirm whether we have received your payment or not and adjust accordingly. Please add the date for which the payment was sent so we may help you better.
